Sachse Construction opens Ontario office

Birmingham-based Sachse Construction has become an international firm, opening an office in Canada.

The construction firm, which specializes in interior build-outs of retail stores, restaurants, corporate offices and condo developments, opened an office in St. Thomas, Ontario, and completed its first project there: a Club Monaco store in Scarborough, Ontario's Scarborough Town Centre.

The new office marks the firm's second office, including its headquarters.

Todd Sachse, president of the company, said requests from existing customers, primarily international retailers and restaurant chains, motivated the expansion.

"We work throughout the United States for many of our retail and restaurant clients, and a growing number of them wanted us to handle their projects outside the country, too," he said. "This was a logical progression, especially given our headquarters' proximity to Canada."

Sachse likes the growth opportunities in Canada, where the economy hasn't been as negatively impacted by the global recession. The company is currently also pursuing work in British Columbia and Ottawa, he said.
